

News from Terrawatu, Tanzania Northern Spring 2010

TERRAWATU is hard at work preparing for many exciting projects coming its way! In the upcoming weeks we will be forging ahead in eradicating malaria in rural Maasailand; installing computers in pioneering Tanzanian schools; and hosting an amazing group of student interns coming from the United States to serve in Tanzania during their summer holiday.

Our partners are in the midst of raising donations - computers, money, and woman and man-power - to head on over to Tanzania and be the change they want to see in this world. Check out <http://gta-wwu.org/> and <http://www.mlhp.org/> to see more.

Terrawatu's People-to-People Safari operation has led student groups from Washington College in Maryland for many years. This year we will host a group of ten volunteers from the College during June-July.

The experience is always life-changing for both American and Tanzanian students. Here are some words from a Washington College student who visited in 2009:

"There are so many great things to say about our trip, especially being able to touch down in Africa and really interact with the people there: it sure beats reading out of a text book. Dropping off school supplies to students in need, and getting to teach Math class were definitely highlights of my trip. I have to say that the best part, though, was getting to know both the locals in each town we visited and my fellow students. Everyone had such different perspectives on the issues at hand and I think when it all comes down to it, learning about people is the most important thing a student can do." - Ben, Washington College
